Elevating Wellness is a nonprofit organization dedicated to fostering mental, emotional, physical, and financial wellness for youth and families. Through our innovative programs, we provide hands-on experiences that encourage self-sufficiency, education, and community engagement. Our initiatives range from financial literacy workshops and physical health programs to immersive agricultural education, all designed to empower individuals with lifelong skills.

One of our most exciting projects is the Art-i-Zen Greenhouse Collective: Youth Arts & Wellness Initiative, which aims to restore and transform an underutilized greenhouse space into a thriving, sustainable learning hub. The greenhouse is a shared resource for the school, community center, and the broader community, providing a unique space for hands-on education. This initiative will allow schoolchildren and community members to engage in experiential learning about nutrition, gardening, and environmental sustainability. Through hydroponic and aquaponic systems, participants will explore innovative food production methods, gaining valuable knowledge about urban agriculture and sustainable practices.
